The AAFGG management team currently hold Board Member Positions on more than twenty (20) international trusts, acting as director and/or general manager of an extensive array of humanitarian projects. These trusts and foundations were formed for the betterment of the less privileged and continuing with development in the many needed fields of improvement including but not limited to education, medical, transportation, fossil fuels recovery, and research and development of alternative resources. In addition, AAFGG as a company guideline reinvests a significant portion of its net proceeds from its limited partnership and joint venture initiatives into the community from where the profits were derived.

AAFFG has a dedicated Humanitarian Division that manages the day-to-day operations and financial controls required to fulfill the company's obligations and agreements. The humanitarian efforts will primarily focus on housing, medical and education programs but is expected to expand into other areas.
